

Dear Sir/Madam,

My name is Mansi Rajesh Khanna. I have been working in the United States for Fidelity Investments Inc. on an H1-B visa but the United States has been my home since I first came here on an F1 visa to study in August 2021. Unfortunately, I was laid off from my job in March 2023. I am now requesting to change my visa status to a B-2 visitor visa status so that I have more time to wrap up my life here, visit the people I love and explore the United States. I have a full life here in the United States and need some time to tie up loose ends before I leave. I currently own a car in the United States and would like to sell it. I have also built a relationship with my boyfriend here that is going to be heavily impacted by my departure. I would be grateful for the opportunity to spend a little more time with him so that we can emotionally prepare to be so far apart from one another.

I would also like to visit friends and family that live here in the United States. While I was in school I made a very close group of friends that ultimately became a family to me. After we graduated, we all went in different directions. Some of my friends now live in California and others live in the Midwest. I would love to visit them before I leave.

My brother whom I am close with also lives in the United States. My brother lives in Seattle. I wish to spend more time with him. I would also love to travel with my brother. Florida and Alaska are on my list of places I wanted to see while I was in the United States but I haven't had the chance to visit yet.

If I can do these things I will feel much more at peace when I leave the United States. I have a home and a family to go back to in India and will return there when my authorized stay ends. Respectfully request that you approve my change of status.

Sincerely,
Mansi Khanna
